

Beadnell Bay

Volunteer Ranger

David Woodfall

The Shorebird Site

Beadnell Bay is crucial for threatened nesting and wintering shorebirds – in the summer, thousands of birds, including Arctic terns, little terns and ringed plover, come here to breed

The role

You will be based at the perimeter of the site and will be engaging with beach users, educating and inspiring them about the site and the species that breed there. You will help to protect the birds by asking visitors to keep their dogs on a short lead and by explaining access restrictions. You will also help the ranger to monitor for any predator activity.

Who we are looking for...

You will be based at the perimeter of the site and will be engaging with beach users, educating and inspiring them about the site and the species that breed there. You will help to protect the birds by asking visitors to keep their dogs on a short lead and by explaining access restrictions, and help the ranger to monitor for any predator activity.

Contact: james.porteus@nationaltrust.org.uk
01665 576874

Phone:

National Trust

